DESCRIPTION

- 7a. Architectural style: Greek Revival
- 7b. Briefly describe the present physical description of the site or structure and describe any major alterations from its original condition:

This building typifies the Greek Revival style of architecture used for commercial buildings, specifically banks. The main features are the pair of Ionic columns supporting the front topped with a pedimented roof shape. The architrave is very simple with horizontal coarsing. The exterior is stucco with run moldings in stucco. The side of the building is fenestrated with two coarsing of winds. The addition of the awnings are not consistent with the style of architecture.

SIGNIFICANCE

19. Briefly state historical and/or architectural importance (include dates, events, and persons associated with the site.)
This building is the only pure example of Greek Revival architecture in Healdsburg. Frank A. Sullivan of Santa Rosa was the builder of this structure in 1908, the engineer in-charge was C.F. Wieland. The construction cost was $37,000 in 1908. It was built as the Farmers & Mechanics Bank. This bank was organized in 1877 by several prominent local businessmen. In 1912 it became the First National Bank of Healdsburg. In 1929 this bank entered the Giannini chain and consolidated with the local Liberty Bank. In 1930 after more mergers and consolidations, it was absorbed by the Bank of America and moved to 320 Healdsburg Avenue. In 1931 and 1932 the building was used as the LeBaron Dairy. It is now used to house various retail shops and offices.
